What Is Gap Insurance and Do You Really Need It?

Standard auto insurance may not cover everything after a total loss. Learn how GAP insurance can help bridge the financial gap.

- GAP insurance covers the difference between your vehicle's value and what you still owe on your loan or lease if it's totaled or stolen.
- New vehicles depreciate quickly, which can leave you owing more than your car is worth.
- GAP insurance is especially beneficial if you made a small down payment, have a long-term loan, or lease your vehicle.
- It only applies to total losses, such as a totaled vehicle or unrecovered theft it does not cover repairs, maintenance, or missed loan payments.
- Consider other important coverages like liability, uninsured/underinsured motorist (UM/UIM), and personal injury protection (PIP) for more complete financial protection after an accident.

How Social Media Can Hurt Your Personal Injury Claim

Even an innocent photo or status update could be used against you after an accident. Learn five smart social media tips to help safeguard your personal injury case.

- Avoid posting about your accident, injuries, recovery, or lawsuit while your case is ongoing.
- Limit social media activity and make your accounts private to reduce unwanted attention.
- Do not share photos, videos, travel updates, check-ins, or location tags that could be taken out of context.
- Ask friends and family not to tag you or post about your accident, injuries, or activities.
- Remember that insurance companies and defense attorneys may review your social media, and always consult your attorney before deleting posts or changing accounts.
